Manager Charles Burnham is making a careful study of the audiences who go o see "Rosedale" at the Star Theatre, the sits in one of the boxes and never ooks at the stage His gaze is riveted upon the auditorium. Said he yesterials: "As a proof that the theatregers of to-day are interested in the loce, I will tell you that there have been many complaints made to the sahers of the gray-headed, reminiscence-oving people who persist in talking and itscussing the old casts. They have been a positive nuisance and disturbance. The young people want to see a Rosedale, and are not anxious to pay but their money for the sake of listening to the interminable chatter of the pold-timers."

The great "gag" among newly arrived rariety people at present is the announcement that they have just filled an engagement at the Folles Bergere, Paris. That mot has now come to be looked rigement at the Folies Bergere, Paris. That mot has now come to be looked upon as inevitable. Every third-rate lancer, fourth-rate tumbler, fifth-rate wire-walker, sixth-rate fat woman, seventh-rate juggler, or eighth-rate singer has just arrived from the Folies Bergere. The name is used on programmes—wrongly spelled, in nineteen cases out of twenty. It used to be the Alhambra or Empire, which were easier to spell. But the English 'alls have become too common.

Miss Jeffreys Lewis, of whom we have heard little lately, is going to star again. She is rehearsing a play that has not yet been named, and that is add to be-on the style of "Sowing the Wind." 'Her repertore will include three new plays. She will open her season in the South, and will also tour California.

"Pauline Hall is enjoying her visit to New York. She can be seen daily riding through the Park." How nice for the Park!

The reason of the failure of "A Woman's Revenge" in New York is very amusingly explained in one of the English papers. "It has not been well received," declares the writer in question; "not, it appears, because the piece itself is regarded as bad, but because the sight of the lawyers or their wigs and gowns in the trial scene always sends the house into convulsions. Lawyers never wear that sort of thing in the States, you know, which is rather rough on this interesting play." Ha! ha! and likewise He! He! "A Woman's Revenge" would have failed in New York with or without wigs.

Miss Kate Claxton made great efforts of secure Mme. Janauschek for the role of Mme. Frochard in that play entitled The Two Orphans," that ahe is shortly in introduce to American audiences. It was promptly announced that Mme. Janauschek had been engaged. The to introduce to American audiences. It was promptly announced that Mme. Janauschek had been engaged. The tragelienne, however, who has never yet supported any American star, didn't propose beginning with Miss Claxton, and she is now touring the larger clies with the speech she was to have delivered at the World's Fair.

heads, and trying to entertain us in male characters as best they could. But at present the idea is rather revolting. It is an exhibition of the two-headed-tealf order. We may now look for 'Hambell', with a cast of performing dogs.'

The chorus girl's lot in Lillian Russell's company just now is not a happy one. She has to appear in "The Princess Nicotine" every night, and rehearse "Girofle-Girofla" every day. The company is at present in Boston. Next week, Miss Russel and her Perugini will take a rest, and on March 2 "Girofle-Girofla" every day. The company is at present in Boston. Richard Mansfield is going to England at the close of the present season for the purpose of giving himself—no, not the public—a little needed rest. He is on the lookout for new plays, which he finds it difficult to get. Mansfield is not exactly one to be envised by his colleagues. At present Mansfield is still devoting himself to his good, old repertoire.

Miss Kathrine Clemmons sat in a box at the Fifth Avenue Theatre Monday night and interested herself in the stage that she had so superbly adorned just two nights before. She looked very pretty perched up in the box, and it is the opinion of many that if she gave up the idea of posing as a tragedy queen, and devoted herself to comedy, she might still be happy.

Robert Buchanan, the aggressive English playwright, who accused Paul Potter of purloining his ideas in "Sheridan; or. The Maid of Bath," and then showed that those ideas, embodied in an unsuccessful play produced in London, were no good, is now similarly accused himself by a man.named Cumberland. Cumberland has seen Buchanan's latest work, "The Chariatan," and in it recognizes, he claims, a play of his own.
